Meet the Playwright

Traci Sellers (Playwright/Laura White) Although I never met Laura I knew the fruit of her labor. I lived in her home and enjoyed her perennial garden that came back every year. Her daughter Amy Lou was my loving and kind Mother in Law. The facts I used for writing this play were supplied by an interview I had with her some years ago. I have been in the Rock Church Play off and on since 2014 and enjoy it immensely. I also teach Shakespeare classes to youth and have directed 3 stage productions of his works.

Meet the Director

Kristin Bringhurst-This is Kristin's 12th year with the Rock Church Summer Theater. She is grateful to work with this amazing staff and cast and appreciates everyone who has given so much of their time and energy to this production. Kristin loves all things THEATER whether it be acting, directing, or enjoying a play from the audience. She also loves eating good food, pulling weeds, tap dancing, and American Sign Language. She loves spending time with her family and is proud to be a native of Star Valley.

Setting

Thayne Wyoming in the 1930's: Scenes in downtown Thayne, the Orlan White Home, and the White Barn.

Fact vs. Fiction

The events and characters in this play are a fictional account of the Orlan Alma White family. They are not meant to be an accurate representation of characters or events. Facts are noted here... the rest is just for fun!

Orlan was the Town Marshall in Thayne, WY when it had its first robbery and shootout. His two eldest daughters married two brothers (hired hands) on the same day. He took the job as Thayne town Marshall for the pay of $275 which was raised from $75 according to the Thayne Town records. Orlan made it a point to dance with his wife at every dance even though he was in the band. He often danced with his girls too.

According to Amy Lou White Sellers, the family often had bread and milk for dinner when times were lean, she remembers the meal of creamed peas and new potatoes being the first food to break the monotony of poor, end of winter fare.

In 1895, the Indian Agent at Fort Hall wrote his superior in Washington City of the reputation of Jackson's Hole, "There are a few good citizens ranching in the Jackson Hole country, the majority of the citizens being men 'who have left their country for their country's good,' the Jackson Hole country being recognized in this country as the place of refuge for outlaws of every description from Wyoming, Idaho, and adjacent States."

Fact vs. Fiction

Monte Nethercott, from Jackson was on the ground outside "Dad's Bar" with fists flying every direction, when he said he was boldly lifted into the air by the shirt collar and came face to face with the biggest man he had seen in his whole life. The policeman told him that it would be a GOOD idea if he got out of town immediately, and if he ever came back they would put him in jail and throw away the key. He had no doubt whatsoever that he was being told the truth, and as soon as his feet touched the ground again he was on his way.

Laura White gathered local herbs to doctor her family with, Amy Lou recalls drinking Yarrow and Peppermint tea for many illnesses and ailments.

Amy Lou White really scraped the gum off the seats of the schoolhouse for years. Amy Lou relates that there was one day in her childhood she remembers her and her brother Leland sneaking out of school to see the cutter races and her father, as Marshall, catching them and then giving them permission to stay.

From the History of Alma White: "...we had all gone to bed when suddenly someone started banging on the door. Dad answered and was informed that someone was trying to break into the sporting goods store in Thayne. He had started putting on his clothes when I asked him if he wanted me to go with him and he said yes...[when we got there] Dad ran back to the side of the car just as they were backing out from the curb. He was ordering them to stop and they were trying to convince him that they just wanted to get the car off the road. Actually they were trying to get the car on to the road so they could speed away. Finally Dad aimed his revolver down through the side window and pulled the trigger. There were two people in the car, a man and a woman. The bullet sent shattered glass into the man's face and then traveled down through the flesh of the woman's upper leg. They were not willing to play any more games after that and we secured their car, put them in my car, and took them to the hospital in Afton.

This Old Rock Church in Auburn, Wyoming is one of the oldest buildings in Star Valley and the only nineteenth century structure still in use in the area. It was constructed in the fall of 1889 by volunteer labor. In 1984 the Old Rock Church was deeded to the Star Valley Historical Society and since has been restored to its present condition. In January 1986 the building was accepted for the National Register of Historic Places.

Star Valley, summer home for the Shoshone Indians, was visited by Wilson Price Hunt's Astorian fur trappers as early as 1812. Traversed by emigrants bound for the Oregon Country from 1856 to 1860 on the Lander Cutoff. The high mountain valley became summer pasture land for cattle belonging to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. Salt beds in the area were important to the Indians as well as trappers, emigrants, explorers and herders; and exports were made far into the Oregon Territory. After the death of the great Mormon colonizer Brigham Young in 1877, the Mormon Church continued to make settlements. Permanent settlers moved into Star Valley two years later in 1879 and settled the west side of the north end of the Upper Valley. It was not until the spring of 1888 that these hardy pioneer farmers and ranchers surveyed the townsite of Auburn. The next summer after crops were harvested the Rock Church was erected in the center of the new townsite. Besides a place of worship the building served as a community center and was used for school, dances, plays, elections, operas, parties, bazaars, reunions, picnics, and patriotic and holiday celebrations. The meetinghouse was even a place of refuge and safety when settlers were threatened by Indian attacks. When a larger frame building was constructed in 1926 the stone building proved better protection during the cold winters and occupancy continued. Three larger houses of worship have been built in succession in Auburn but it is the Old Rock Church which stands as a local landmark. The solid walls symbolize the strengths and values of those who built, lived in, and served in the community. The building is a monument to the early pioneers of Star Valley.
